In our rapidly changing and evolving economy there is no such thing as job security. What's even more daunting is that today's professional is facing the most complex, competitive job market in history! And while it takes most executive-level candidates months to find a new job, a small, select group of professionals are able to pick their careers up right where they left off without ever skipping a beat.

According to Thad Greer, one of the nation's leading Executive Recruiters and Career Strategists, only one-half of 1% of all resumes received by recruiters will ultimately result in a successful placement. Is it luck? Or are these individuals doing something different than everyone else?

In The Executive Rules: A Complete Guide to Landing an Executive Job, Thad reveals the career strategies and actions taken by virtually every candidate that he has successfully placed, proving that luck has little to do with career success. He provides you with firsthand insight as to why the conventional job search strategies being used by the majority of today's candidates are just not working; ultimately forcing them to take the first opportunity that comes along. He then details a comprehensive job search road map that is a blend of web technology and traditional relationship building designed to help you land the job you want in as short a time as possible.
