A Silver Mirror: Ellora's Cave Roberta Gellis

Alphonse d'Aix gave his tourney prize of a silver mirror to a lonely little girl. Since her affairs were also left by her father in Alphonse's hands, Barbara was quite sure he was the man chosen to be her husband.

Alphonse was too kind to laugh at an awkward, unhappy thirteen-year-old, but he made it clear that she was not his chosen. By the time Barbara returned to France, fleeing the unwanted attentions of Guy de Montfort, Alphonse had long regretted his refusal. His immediate proposal of marriage is swiftly accepted. Barbara had hidden her pain but never recovered from her first love. Still, thinking about Alphonse's past life, Barbara decides a semblance of coldness will be necessary to hold his attention. However, Guy de Montfort had not forgotten Barbara's refusal, and was determined out of spite to have her, even if it meant killing Alphonse. But Guy's attacks drive Barbara and Alphonse into the hands of the rebellious Welsh, and amid the tension and terror of freeing Prince Edward from de Montfort's prison, their true love is exposed.
