There are tens of thousands of bankruptcies a year. And there are a number of books for UK advisers and practitioners in bankruptcy. So why this book? What is new now is that there are also hundreds of thousands of individuals and companies crippled by excessive and often unsecured debt. Such situations will increasingly create dilemmas for individuals and those who advise them. Should they go bankrupt? What are its implications? How is it avoided? Or how is it best managed? Professor Muir Hunter's considerable authority in this area gives this book a directness and plain language that ensures the reader will understand what needs to be done as easily as this complex subject allows.
